“ Young Woman”

You fight patriarchy
To change the world, you fight your family.
Every little thing hurts your soul
And all the house work now hurts your sole.
Cooking, cleaning, exceeding their expectations of a beautiful wife.
You still stand up for your rights and raise your voice.

Your alone time, your undeterred design.
The ideals that you believed you were raised on
And now your disappointing life.
You make the perfect breakfast, lunch and then dinner.
You write.
What a poor spectacle.
You are disposed to their image,
Of you.
You have no voice.

Who will take you seriously?
Do you believe in your might?
Will you survive through this pandemic?
Of depression, ambition, and centuries of a woman's plight.
